NATHAN HENRY AND HESTER ALMIRA DUKE BETHERS

ried Hester Almira Duke on March 27, 1918, in the Salt Lake Temple. She was born November 11, 1883, in Wallsburg, Wasatch County, daughter of Allen and Martha Jane Parcell Duke. Henry died May 3, 1961.

Nathan Henry Bethers was his father's right-hand man.

As he grew older he obtained work haul-freight, wool, and in the mines and mills at Park City, herding, and on the railroad when it was built to Heber. He helped his father with his earnings as well as with farm work when he was home.

He was very kind with his parents and brothers and sisters, showing his fine spiritual qualities. He was at home to care for his mother and brother, with the help of his sister, Mary Jane, and her daughter, Lizzie, before the passing of these loved ones. Some of the brothers and their wives helped him care for his father until Henry married Hester Duke of Provo.

Being the second eldest in the family, his wife Hester learned hard work and responsibility in the home. While still very young, she went out to work for others. She was a very fine seamstress and did much sewing for her younger sisters.

As many girls did in those days, Hester went to Provo Bench to pick fruit from the opening of the strawberry season through apricot season, and later in peach and pear season. Among her employers was Dave Stratton.

During her young womanhood she worked for older people for years at a time. She was a happy and congenial girl.

Following their marriage, Henry and Hester cared for Henry's father until his passing, October 7, 1926.

Henry also proved up the homestead rights on the Theodore Freeze place at the head of Daniel Canyon and put his brother Ace on it.

Henry and Hester loved children and all children returned this love. Henry labored hard at all times, and with Hester to care for him they were happy. They had no children of their own, so reared Hiram Plummer, a nephew of Walter S. Plummer. Hiram married Ruby Bethers, daughter of Zadock A. Bethers, and they have three children, whom Henry and Hester adore.
